Ethics in Communication Disorders

Wednesday, April 17, 2024 4:45 sign in; 5:00 - 7:00 pm workshop

We have offered this course annually since 2020. It fulfills the ASHA Ethics Professional Development requirement of at least one hour in Ethics for each 3-year maintenance interval. Please check to see if you need the course for this interval!

Presenter Ramani Voleti, M.S., CCC-SLP/BC-ANCDS is an associate teaching professor and speech language pathologist at the Gebbie Clinic at Syracuse University. Her clinical and research interests include acquired neurogenic speech/language disorders, dysphagia, and voice disorders in adults. She teaches courses in neurogenic communication disorders and professional/ethical issues in medical settings. She is board certified in neurogenic communication disorders in adults through the Academy of Neurologic Communication Disorders and Sciences (ANCDS).

Financial disclosure: Ramani is employed by Syracuse University. She receives an honorarium for this workshop Non-financial disclosure: Ramani has none to report

Program summary “Ethics in Communication Disorders” will provide a 2 hour review of ethical issues/dilemmas pertaining to various settings in the field of both audiology and speech language pathology. In addition, the presenter will facilitate discussions using sample scenarios and present resolutions for these dilemmas using the ASHA Code of Ethics and New York State Code of Ethics.

Learner Outcomes

- Identify several potential scenarios related to ethical dilemmas in their own practice setting.
- Use ASHA and NY state code of ethics as a guide to resolve these issues
- Discuss ways to avoid and prevent ethical dilemmas
